QUEASY DROPS now available for Boaters

Previously available only for cancer patients and pregnant women, Queasy Drops™ now available to boaters to ease sea sickness.

Atlantic City Boat Show, Atlantic City NJ, February 1st 2007 – Three Lollies, LLC has announced that it will move forward with plans to introduce its motion sickness relief lozenges, called Queasy Drops, to the Boating Industry.

Originally developed to ease the queasiness cancer patients experience while undergoing chemotherapy and as Peggie Pops to ease morning sickness the product has been largely unknown outside the medical community. But according to Three Lollies CEO Jim Pathman “There has been an increasing demand to make this product available to consumers to relieve motion sickness.”

Queasy Drops are drug free and non-drowsy. They had to be. Drug interactions can have serious and unexpected consequences for both cancer patients and pregnant women. According to Pathman “There was a tremendous amount of anecdotal evidence, and even some studies, regarding the efficacy of natural products like ginger for treating queasy stomachs. We started looking at these natural cures, at what was really effective, and at concentrating the natural oils and extracts into a lozenge that would provide relief. What we found is that different extracts are more effective for different people. For example ginger might work best for one person, while papaya might be more effective for another.”

The result is Queasy Drops, inexpensive, effective, flavorful and as easy to use as a cough drop.

Queasy Drops are available in variety packs or single flavor packs and as hanging packs or in plastic hard shell cases to survive storage in a boat. They are also available as Queasy Pops Lollipops, and in kid friendly sizes as Queasy Pop Kids.
