16 magazines and 2 Television Shows to spotlight Queasy Drops in April and May.

Extensive media coverage driving increased demand.

Los Angeles, CA, April 6th 2007 – In April and May 16 magazine articles and at least two TV segments will review Queasy Drops. Reviewers will include a variety of Marine Publications and the product will be featured in segments on the Fox Sports Network and the Comcast Sports Network.

Look for magazines as diverse as Spin Sheet, Latitude 38, House Boat, Caribbean Cruising and Practical Sailor to publish reviews.

Originally developed to ease the queasiness among pregnant women and chemotherapy patients the product has been largely unknown outside the medical community. In January of this year parent company Three Lollies announced Queasy Drops would now be available through retailers to ease seasickness. “The response so far has been better than our most optimistic predictions according to Three Lollies CEO Jim Pathman. “Reviewers have been universally supportive of the product, and many have asked for additional samples for their personal boats. It’s extremely satisfying that the drops have been so well received.”

Queasy Drops address an age old problem for boaters, providing a drug free, non-drowsy solution to seasickness sufferers. “There’s no worse feeling than being seasick and knowing landfall is not in going to happen anytime soon. Queasy Drops allow people who would normally be afraid of being sick to enjoy the water.”

Not surprisingly the Cruise Industry has displayed an interest in the product and several lines are discussing the possibility of onboard tests.

Queasy Drops are available in a variety of flavors and sizes and in kid friendly sizes as Queasy Pop Kids.

About Queasy Drops and Queasy Pop Kids

Queasy Drops and Queasy Pop Kids provide non-drowsy, drug free products that ease seasickness in as little as 10 minutes. Just suck on them like a cough drop (Queasy Drops) or a lollipop (Queasy Pop Kids).

About Three Lollies, LLC

Three Lollies has a full line of products used to ease nausea. Originally developed as Preggie Pops and Queasy Drops, our products have been used for seven years by cancer patients to relieve the nausea associated with chemotherapy and by pregnant women to ease their morning sickness.

Previously available only through oncologists and obstetricians, our products are now available through Marine Retailers and Drug Stores for the treatment of seasickness.
